Some students do not know how to take advantage of the learning opportunities available in this school. Boredom, or worry over social acceptance can hinder interest. The strong edge of desire to learn can be dulled by overemphasis on class rank or acceptance into a prestige college. Some students merely occupy desks in classes and remain oblivious to what chances they have of expanding their knowledge within this institution.

The moods of the students reflect the weather.
The halls resound with noise
after the first snowfall, and somber attitudes prevail
during rainstorms.
Nature can alter capacity to learn.

From freshman orientation day,
students are steeped
in tradition:
Times Square, Noil,
the rivalry with Hinsdale,
the bell tower.
After four years of experience,
the student learns to accept traditions as bases for new patterns, not as inalterable rules to follow.

When viewed from a distance,
the cheering section at games
is one massive block.
Up close, small groups
form into people—
people feeling the power of their mass.

Separated from the crowd,
the individual is able to reflect upon the quality of his achievements.
He can criticize his own performance and recognize his limitations.

Discourse is the most direct way to express ideas and feelings.
In talking to an audience,
a speaker communicates his knowledge to others
while clarifying his thoughts in his own mind.
The brief personal contact between speaker and listeners focuses minds on a common insight.

The serious mingles
with the insignificant
in a discussion
The exchange of ideas
broadens the scope of experience
for each participant
New concepts learned vicariously become a part of the learner's life

To interpret and work within the guidelines of another's creativity is a sensitive learning activity.
But, to understand what someone else is saying and enlarge upon it and adapt it to one's own personality is a creative and timeless
learning experience.

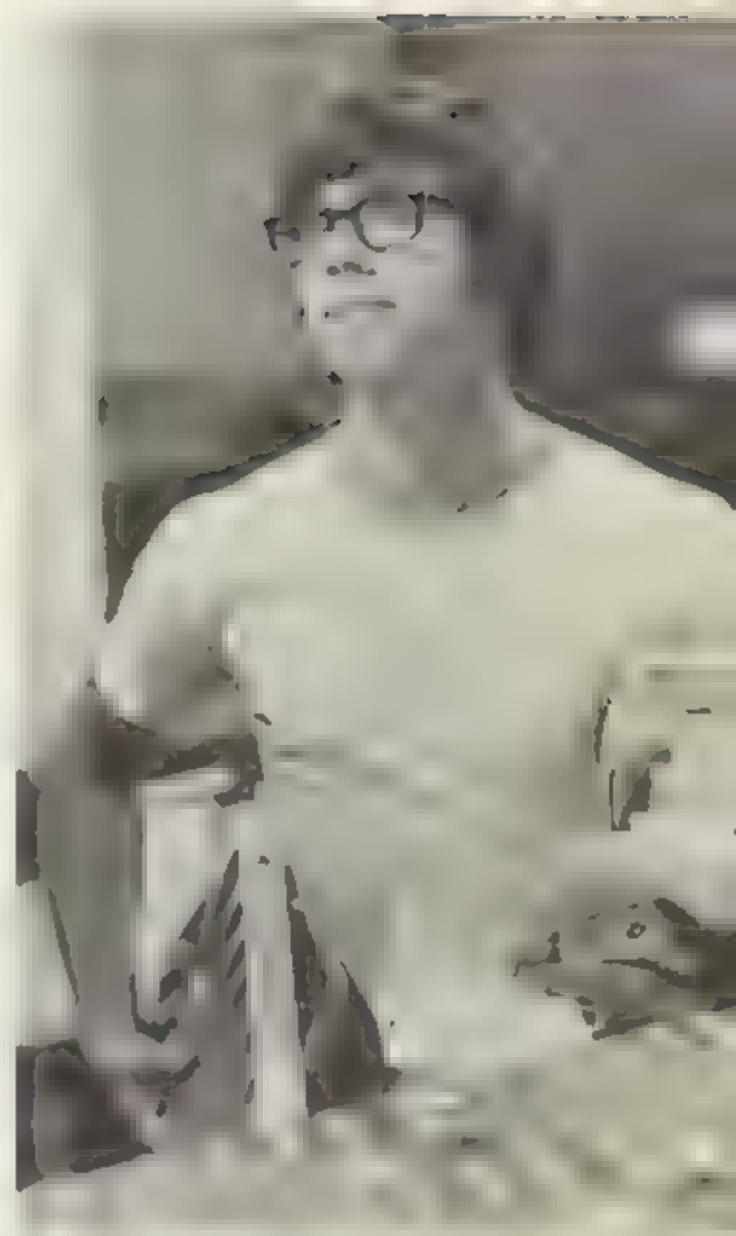

Just as a skier's
years of training
culminate in a two-minute run in the Olympics,
there are clubs, courses, organizations, or groups of friends who practice, study, and drill for one final moment.

The exuberance
at the time of the finale compensates for inconvenience encountered during preparation.

In preparation, invaluable perception of the subject can be obtained.

By plan or by chance, people are obliged to associate with each other,
to shut out the world and concentrate on one another.
They learn
how to handle themselves with other people.

Everyone has,
or would like to have,
one special person
with whom he shares
his proudest moments,
his deepest despair,
even the uneventful moments in life
But even among people who are just friends,
a relationship still exists
on a one-to-one basis.

School provides a multitude of situations
for student learning.
Although many find they prefer their lives away from school, there are those for whom the school's opportunities are ideal.

Lyons Township High School is only one part of a student's learning process.
A cold atmosphere of concentrated instruction hardly completes an education.
Student life steps outside the structured LT environment and becomes as diverse as it was unified

The popular image of a student as a sponge constantly absorbing fresh knowledge is unrealistic.

Everyone needs time
to ignore the rest of the world, to sit quietly and reflect upon what he has learned.

The knowledge and experience culled from his every move must be sorted and arranged in his mind.

Waiting, walking, watching,
People find moments of peace.

They look at a job finished,
a fact memorized,
a place deserted,
and are satisfied.

at school

It is there.
A mass of concrete and bricks looms above quiet rows of houses and green suburban lawns

We learn there
The 300 courses from which to choose,
the 300 teachers, and the 5200
friends—
they mold us and ask us to fit

We leave there
And it is time, for we have changed.
So many faces, such diverse ideas—
where will they all go?

School groups, visitation team evaluate LT

Two of the three phases of the North Central evaluation of LT have been completed this school year, and the third phase is just beginning

The first step was the intensive 18-month self evaluation of the strengths and weaknesses of the school in which students, faculty, and community members participated

Then in March the visitation team of experts from outside the school came to observe and question and evaluate always measuring the school against its own statements of philosophy and objectives

The third and most significant phase of the total evaluation, the part which is just beginning as the year ends, is the implementation of the recommendations

Specific recommendations were made to all the departments and sub-groups within the school. Among the general recommendations summarized by Dr. John Stanavage, chairman of the visitation team, were: an altering of the present six-period day to permit flexibility in scheduling; elimination of unnecessary pre-requisites for many courses; greater use of individualized instruction; greater use of the resources of the community; and a reappraisal of the school's grading policies, both to investigate means of evaluation other than A-B-C grades and to check the possibility that the standards "may be too harsh and may deceive students about their true abilities."

The evaluation report began with special praise for "a teaching staff far above average in quality and a student body characterized by friendliness, seriousness, and maturity

Administration coordinates school policy

Administrative decision-making and formulation of school policy involved coordination of the ideas of not only the administrators themselves but also many other groups concerned with the school

Committees of parents, teachers, students, and administrators met last year to draw up a working philosophy for the school. This philosophy statement, which emphasizes individual and classroom needs as well as general school atmosphere, was this year brought into implementation by the administration

Members of the administration said that some of their significant decisions dealt with an honor roll qualification change from 34 to 32, a student-requested smoking lounge and an open campus. The administration worked with a group of con-con students to help draft a new constitution for Student Council and Rep Assembly and to help decide the fate of traditional student government

Pupil Services helps students solve problems

Pupil Services constantly worked to give valuable aid to students in all areas. With Mr. Tom Hansen as chairman, the counselors advised students on a wide variety of topics including schedules, family problems, and college plans. Counselors-at-large became part of the service program this year, and they were available for students who "needed a sounding board."

Aiding counselors, the health service and speech clinic provided for the physical needs of students. Because the health service staff was cut for lack of funds, the nurses could not always handle the overflow of ill students. However, they did the best possible job and always took charge in emergencies

English courses stress speaking, reading, writing

Reading, writing, and speaking skills were all valued highly by English teachers, who struggled to impart their intricacies to LT students. Most of the traditional English courses were geared toward accuracy in usage, understanding in literature, and clarity in composition. Speech courses developed student dexterity in oral communication.

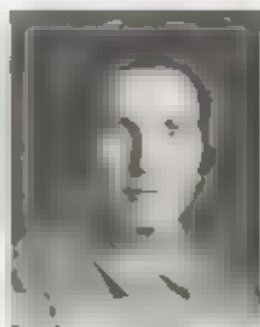

Under Chairman Mr. David Briggs and Assistant Chairman Mrs. Lorana Gleason, the English Department instituted a number of changes which made flexibility a part of its curriculum. For instance, one new course allowed seniors to take a semester instead of a whole year course of English literature to give them time to study other methods of expression in other types of courses. Problems of the Seventies, another semester course, stressed the development of communication through composition with a relevancy that appealed to many students.

Social Studies organizes for individuals

More individual student participation was the goal of the Social Studies Department this year. Seminars, library periods, field trips and a research center were developed in order to stimulate interest.

One important difference in the department was the revised name and program for American history. The title is now United States history. The first semester remained the same as in previous years. During the second half of the year, however, students went into specialized studies of interest dealing with current problems.

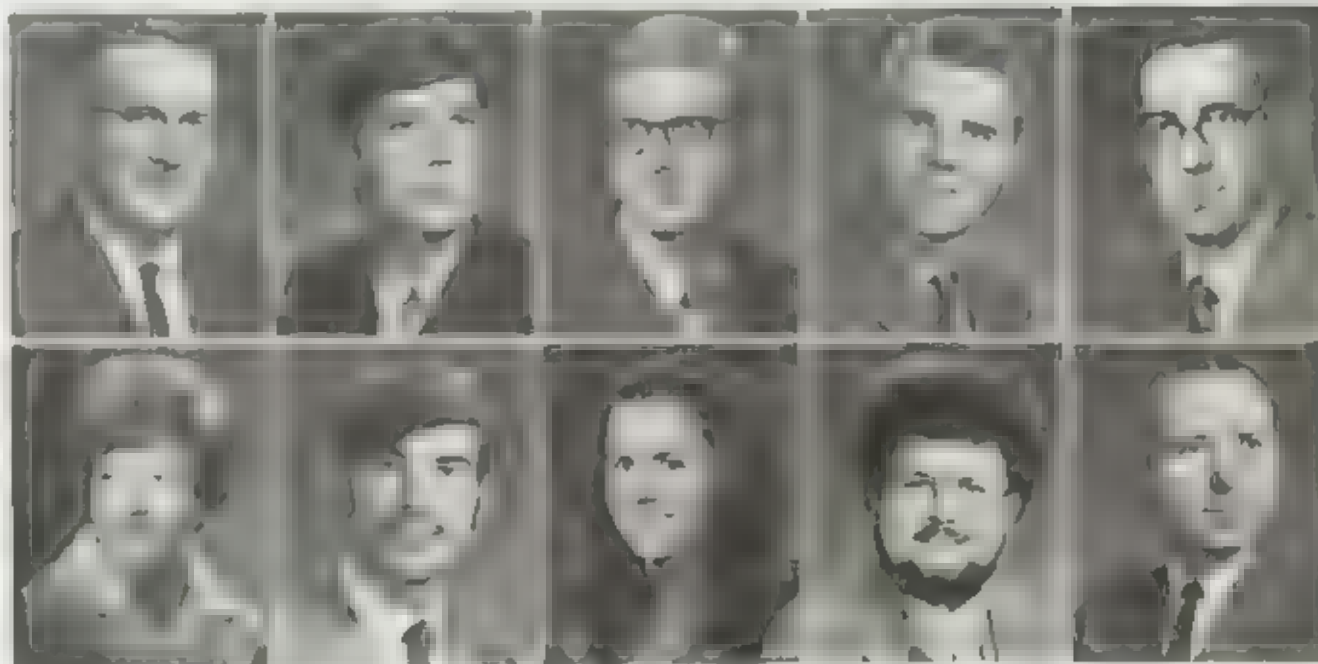

The third-floor research center consisted of books and magazines relating to psychology, cultural anthropology, sociology, and humanities courses. Animals for experimental use in psychology were also included in the center.

Languages emphasize oral communications

Although partially handicapped by a reduced budget, the Language Department made changes in the curriculum stressing personal communication. French, German, and Spanish teachers exploited the best parts of both new and old teaching techniques as they added books using the audio-lingual method to their courses.

Several higher-level language courses oriented themselves toward independent study. Extensive use of the language labs continued to develop the students' speaking ability at all levels.

Math courses emphasize utility, relevance

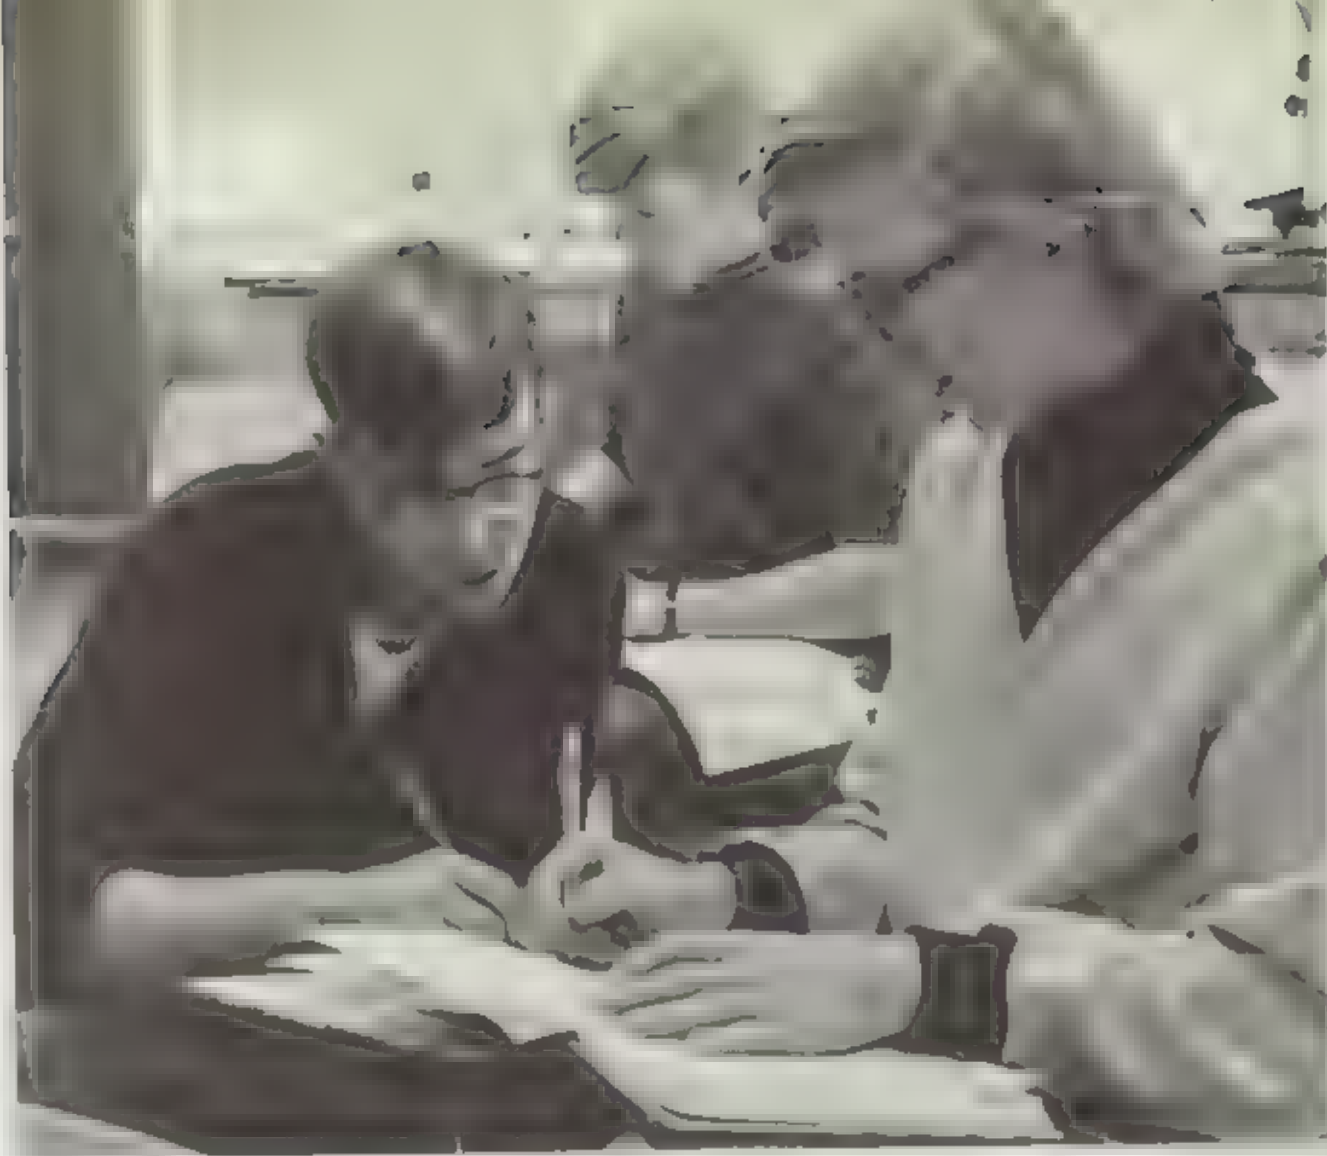

Answering the growing demand for more relevance in education, the Math Department added Applied Mathematics to its curriculum. The traditional courses like algebra and geometry continued to teach math principles and logic. The new course provided sophomores with the opportunity to find a use for their abstract math concepts.

New fields, including surveying, installment buying, and navigation were opened to students by the department.

Science courses concentrate on individual work

Individual instruction as opposed to group lecture was the Science Department's prime concern this year. The method reflects the belief that science is lab and that to trace the development of a field through individual lab work provides a basis for true learning.

The department added organic and qualitative chemistry to the curriculum. In addition, it again offered Investigative Studies, an independent research course which met before school. The projects originating in the course were submitted to either the state science fair or the Westinghouse science talent search.

Business adds team teaching, consumer ed

Team teaching invaded the Business Department this year. Home Ec and Business shared the consumer education course: each department had nine weeks of teaching. This new program also resulted in a revised and enlarged use of audio-visual aids. Mr. Carl Nemecek, department chairman, reported that procedures of training have been updated through the addition of new equipment in many of the classrooms.

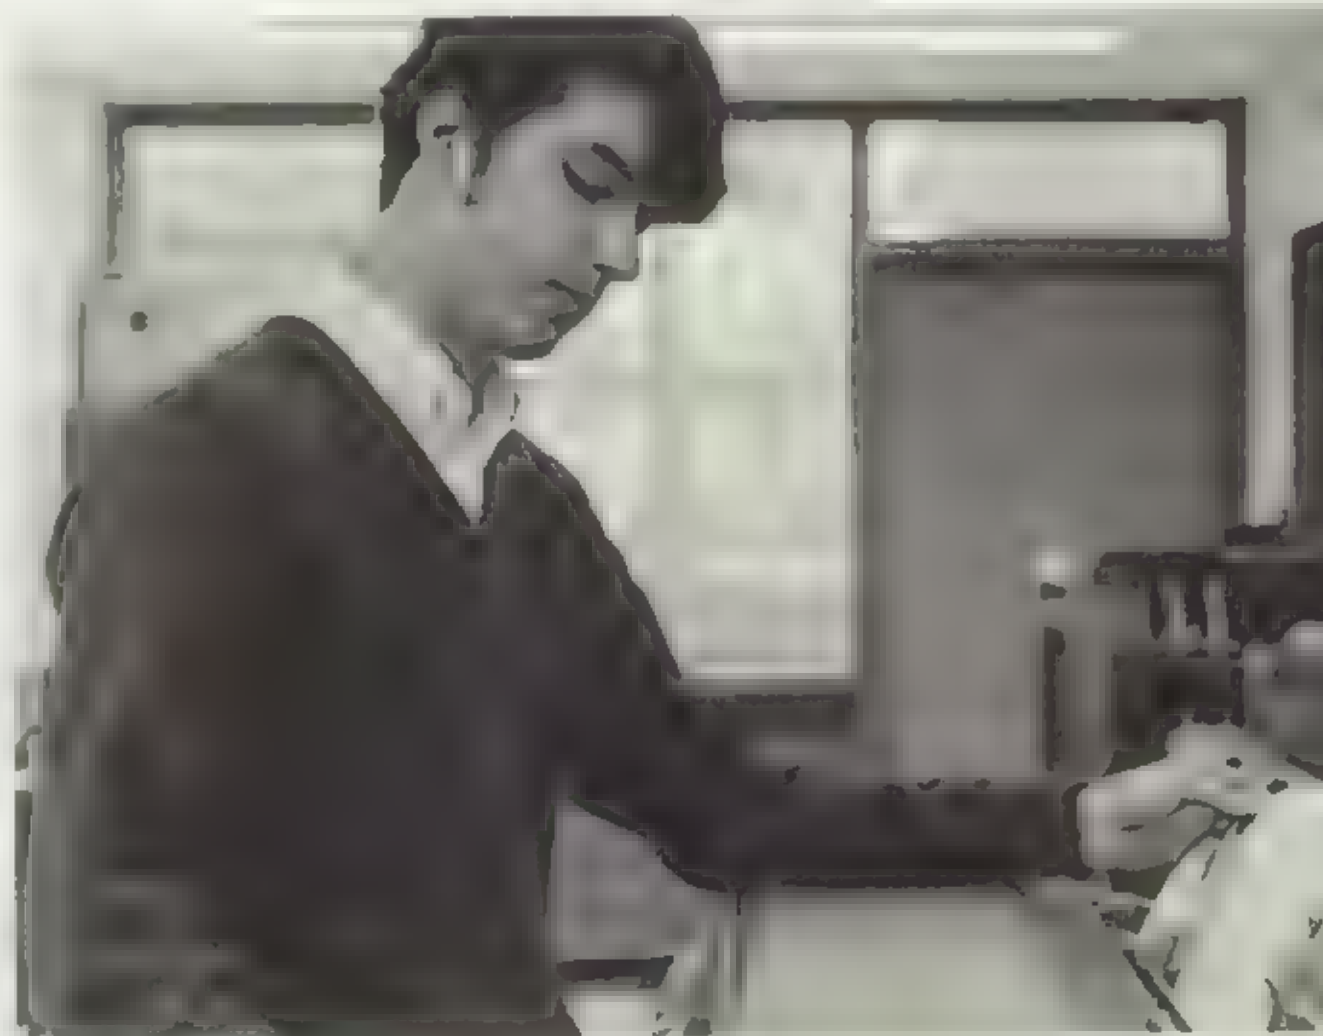

Increased enrollment in business courses resulted in the addition of two teachers. There was also substantial growth in cooperative education, better known as the work study program, which provided experience in office occupations and distributive education.

New art courses reflect increased enrollment

During the last two years a newly-awakened interest in the Industrial and Visual Arts Department has been stimulating a fresh series of course offerings. The department has responded to the needs of its students by creating courses which allow the student to choose his field of study. Industrial Arts Contracts and Independent Arts Studies are two programs in which the student pursues an individualized project which his teacher considers to be realistically and educationally sound. The department feels that the realization of college requirements and the elimination of grades have given students freedom to choose courses which parallel their interests more closely.

Enrollment in the last years has increased one hundred per cent, and the department was still forced to refuse another two hundred student requests for art courses. Presently all art facilities are being used to capacity. In the future, the department plans to expand and provide adequate space to accommodate the new enthusiasm for art.

Home Ec encourages self-expression

Though everyday costs seem to rise at an unbelievable rate, this year's Home Ec Department students should be well equipped to deal with consumers' problems. The students promised to emerge specialists in such areas as consumer education and creative self-expression

One major emphasis of LT's Home Ec Department was on the role young people will play in the future. By concentrating on time management and cooperation between students, the department hoped not only to improve students' home economics skills but also to aid them in various facets of their daily lives

Music expands opportunities for participation

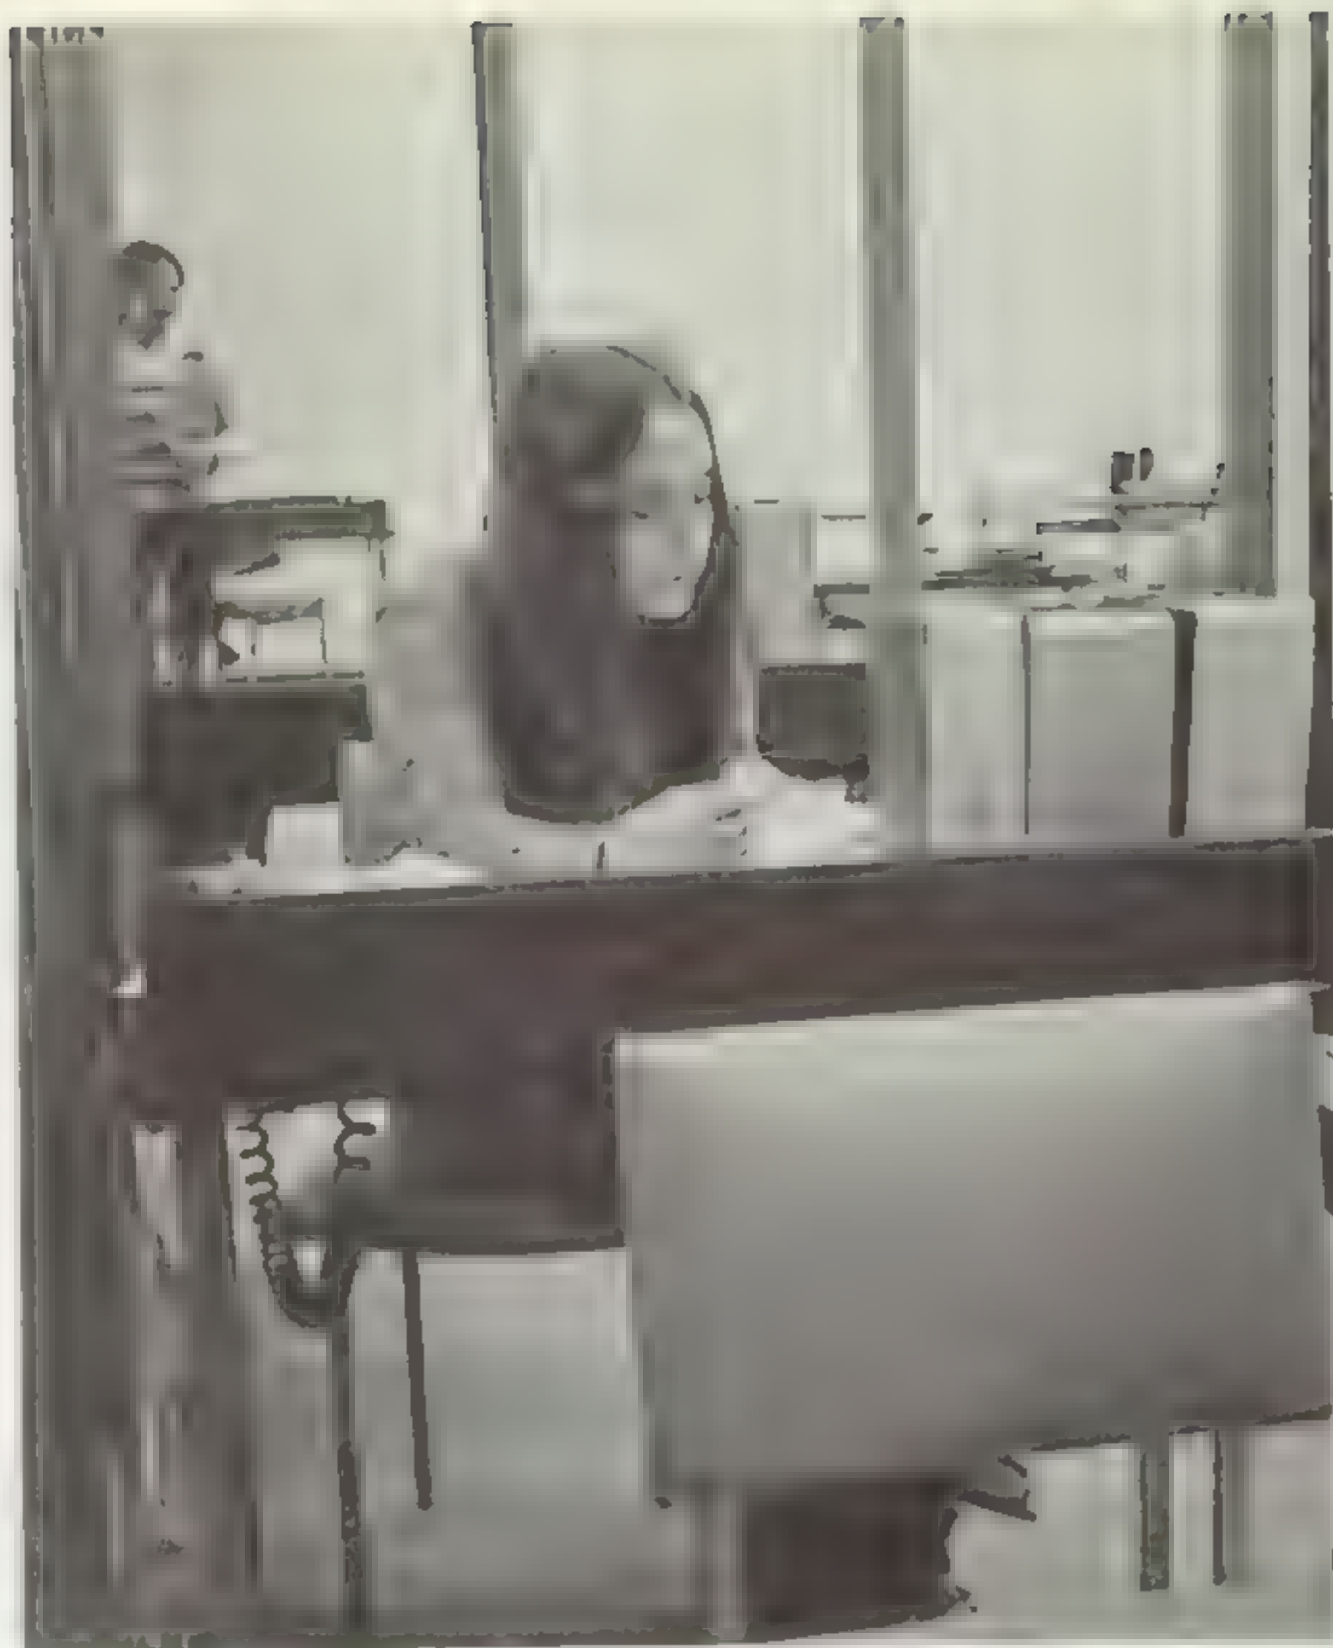

Because of the growing number of students involved with the Music Department this year, more opportunities for participation were introduced. Extra-curricular activities such as Freshman Mixed Ensemble, Chamber Orchestra, and Stage Band met on a regular basis to prepare for performances throughout the year. Several small groups, including bands, choral groups and orchestra, participated in student-sponsored recitals.

The department sponsored a European concert tour during the summer for a group of 35 students. The LT Choir cut a Christmas record and appeared on television.

Libraries add microfilm, cassettes

During the past two decades, the character of the Library has changed from that of a mere book center to a multi-media exchange. This year new communication devices supplemented the standard literature. The North Campus library made available a new xerox microprinter which not only duplicates single pages, but also reads and reprints two types of microfilm. The established microfilm collection was enlarged to include all copies of The New York Times dating from 1957.

Students reacted with enthusiasm to the cassette tape recorders and 8mm cameras loaned by libraries at both campuses. North Campus also provided complete photo developing facilities. The result of media-oriented expansion within the library has been a decrease in fiction circulation. Library attendance, however, has not been affected; both libraries have become more lively, resource-full research areas.

Driver Ed teaches skills, responsibility

Along with a national shift of emphasis, the LT Driver Education Department stressed a policy of defensive driving. Students were instructed to be more aware of prevailing weather and environmental conditions and especially of other drivers.

Included in the four-phase driver training program are classroom, simulator, behind the wheel, and the range, which is one of the few ranges in the state. This year, as always, the Driver Education Department worked to instill a feeling of responsibility in the students toward themselves, other drivers, and private property.

PE expands, intramurals, girls teams

Increased interest in intramural sports prompted the Physical Education Department to add to the activities offered this year. Water polo, table tennis, and flag football were part of the modification in the after-school program. Relaxed interscholastic rules created expanded competition for girls.

Gym classes also increased in diversity with the addition of new equipment, two student teachers, and a new diving coach, Mr. Tom Johnson. Advanced studies in gymnastics on the junior level supplemented the freshman course. Although the staff would have to be further increased, the department hoped for daily classes to broaden curriculum and provide more individual attention.

In an attempt to prepare students for more self-sufficient lives, the La-Grange Area Department of Special Education developed two distinct programs for high school age students. The TMH (Trainable Mentally Handicapped) dealt with improving students in the areas of academic, social, and vocational skills so that they would be able to succeed in a world outside the school environment. EMH (Educable Mentally Handicapped) was in the process of adding science and industrial arts to the pre-vocational courses already offered to slow learners.

Employees serve school, aid students

Attempting to give LT the best of services, Service Personnel continued in their unglorified but essential tasks. The foundation of LT's smooth operation was its secretaries. In the deans' offices, for example, the staff lent a sympathetic but stern ear to the usual excuses from tardy or absent students.

Aided by concerned students anxious to cooperate in the battle against pollution, the janitor and cafeteria staffs created a cleaner school atmosphere in the cafeteria, student lounge, halls and lockers. The effects of the increased service personnel budget were readily apparent through general school cleanliness.

Co-curricular clubs add to employment

Co-curricular clubs complemented the working experience of students with a vocational objective. Three such clubs at LT coordinated the classroom with a fifteen-hour-per-week job. Restaurants and hospitals employed Food Service members led by Mrs. Agnes Evans. Distributive Education (DECA) students taught by Mr. Robert Paulsen, were primarily concerned with marketing. Mrs. Ruth Wernett sponsored students in the Cooperative Office Education (COE) who worked at a multiplicity of office jobs.

Every student enrolled in a vocational course earned two credits: one for the time he devoted to his occupation, the other for his classroom accomplishments. Extra experiences such as conventions, workshops, and visits to Chicago businesses stimulated a club-like atmosphere in all three organizations.

Aides deliver messages, file, collect passes

With a new security ruling in effect, Office Aides carried brightly decorated paddles to flash at security guards. Aides in various offices completed routine jobs necessary in running a school the size of L.F.

In addition to delivering slips, collecting study hall passes, recording absences, and filing cards, aides performed specialized tasks. Counselors' aides supplemented advice given to students by recording their opinions on education and careers, and helped organize vocational material. Audio-Visual aides operated and repaired equipment.

Soph choirs practice singing, display talent

Sophomore music enthusiasts had a choice to improve their talents in one of three different courses. The most select was the Sophomore Mixed Chorus, under the leadership of Mrs. Kathryn Luhring. Also available to interested students were Treble Chorus, directed by Mr. Fred Lawler, and Concert Chorus, directed by Mrs. Luhring.

Freshmen were greeted with the chance to develop their musical abilities through the freshmen vocal program, which consisted of Freshman Girls' Glee Club, Freshman Boys' Glee Club, and Freshman Mixed Chorus.

Choir produces holiday music record album

Treble Choir, a singing group consisting of 75 North Campus girls, performed for benefits in addition to singing at regular school activities. Under the guidance of Miss Lynne Bradley, Treble Choir sang at four school concerts in the course of the year.

Increased enrollment and experimental techniques in warm-ups helped strengthen Concert Choir. Richer tone was achieved with a fuller complement of male voices. The choir concentrated on gaining a repertoire of contemporary music to perform at various concerts and community activities.

The LT Choir was chosen by Delta Records to produce a Christmas album this year. The choir also appeared on television as guests on the Sunday Evening Club. After the operetta Fiddler on the Roof, was over, choir members began to work on oratorio music.

Small Choir entertains at varied affairs

An early performance for Small Choir at Homecoming half-time called for auditions soon after the start of the school year. In its first concert of the year, Small Choir was joined by a stage band to revive a 'swinging fifties' sound.

Throughout the rest of the year Small Choir had many invitations to sing at banquets, dinners, and teas. The group moved out into the community to brighten routine events such as P.T.A. dinners and Chamber of Commerce meetings.

Orchestra adds improvisation, electric numbers

The Symphony Orchestra added unusual effects to some of their concert numbers this year. The enthusiastic bass section alternately swayed or spun their instruments in time to some of the lighter numbers in the pops concert. Electric orchestra and solo improvisations, as well as the more traditional orchestral arrangements, were also part of the orchestra's new sound this year.

Some students organized recitals to present the musicians' ensembles. Others gained extra playing experience as members of the Chamber Orchestra, which accompanied several LT plays.

Bands play at halftimes, in parades

Instructed and conducted by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf and Mr. Paul Barber the three LT Bands performed together for the Fall, Spring, and Choral Concerts. The North Campus Band was invited to play at the Palmer House for a school administrators association conference

To arouse school spirit and provide halftime entertainment, the bands played at home football and basket ball games. Mr. Hilgendorf also taught the players how to march in precision formations so that, as a service to the community, the bands could play in the Memorial Day and Pet Parades

National Honor Society elects elite group

Each year the top third of the junior class and top third of the senior class are eligible for election to the National Honor Society. Although academic achievement is the major criterion, a student must also be approved by his teachers, his counselor, and the dean. Extracurricular activities are considered, and good recommendations from club sponsors prove valuable. Juniors receive notification about whether or not they have been chosen in May. Seniors are informed early in February.

Fred Fitch and Jim Littlejohn hopefully search for their names on the National Honor Society list.

Scholars receive National Merit, state awards

Sixty-five seniors were honored with National Merit awards. Finalists scored in the top half of one percent of all students who took the nationwide test. Those scoring in the top two percent received special recognition as Letter of Commendation winners.

On the basis of ACT results, almost two hundred LT seniors were named Illinois State Scholars. For students who planned to attend a state school or an approved private school in Illinois, and could prove financial need, the scholarship commission awarded grants from $100 to $1,000.

FRC encourages friendship with foreign students

Foreign Relations Committee extended the open hand of special friendship to foreign students at LT. The committee created several opportunities for the exchange of ideas and customs. A number of small social gatherings were held during the year at which LT students could become acquainted with foreign students and their life-styles. FRC held a Christmas tea and organized a weekend when LT families were hosts to foreign students from neighboring schools.

The annual American Field Service drive for funds in the spring was instrumental in providing support for two foreign students next year. In all their efforts, the committee hoped that what they have done might be a step toward achieving common human understanding.

Robi's camera will record many impressions of his year at LT

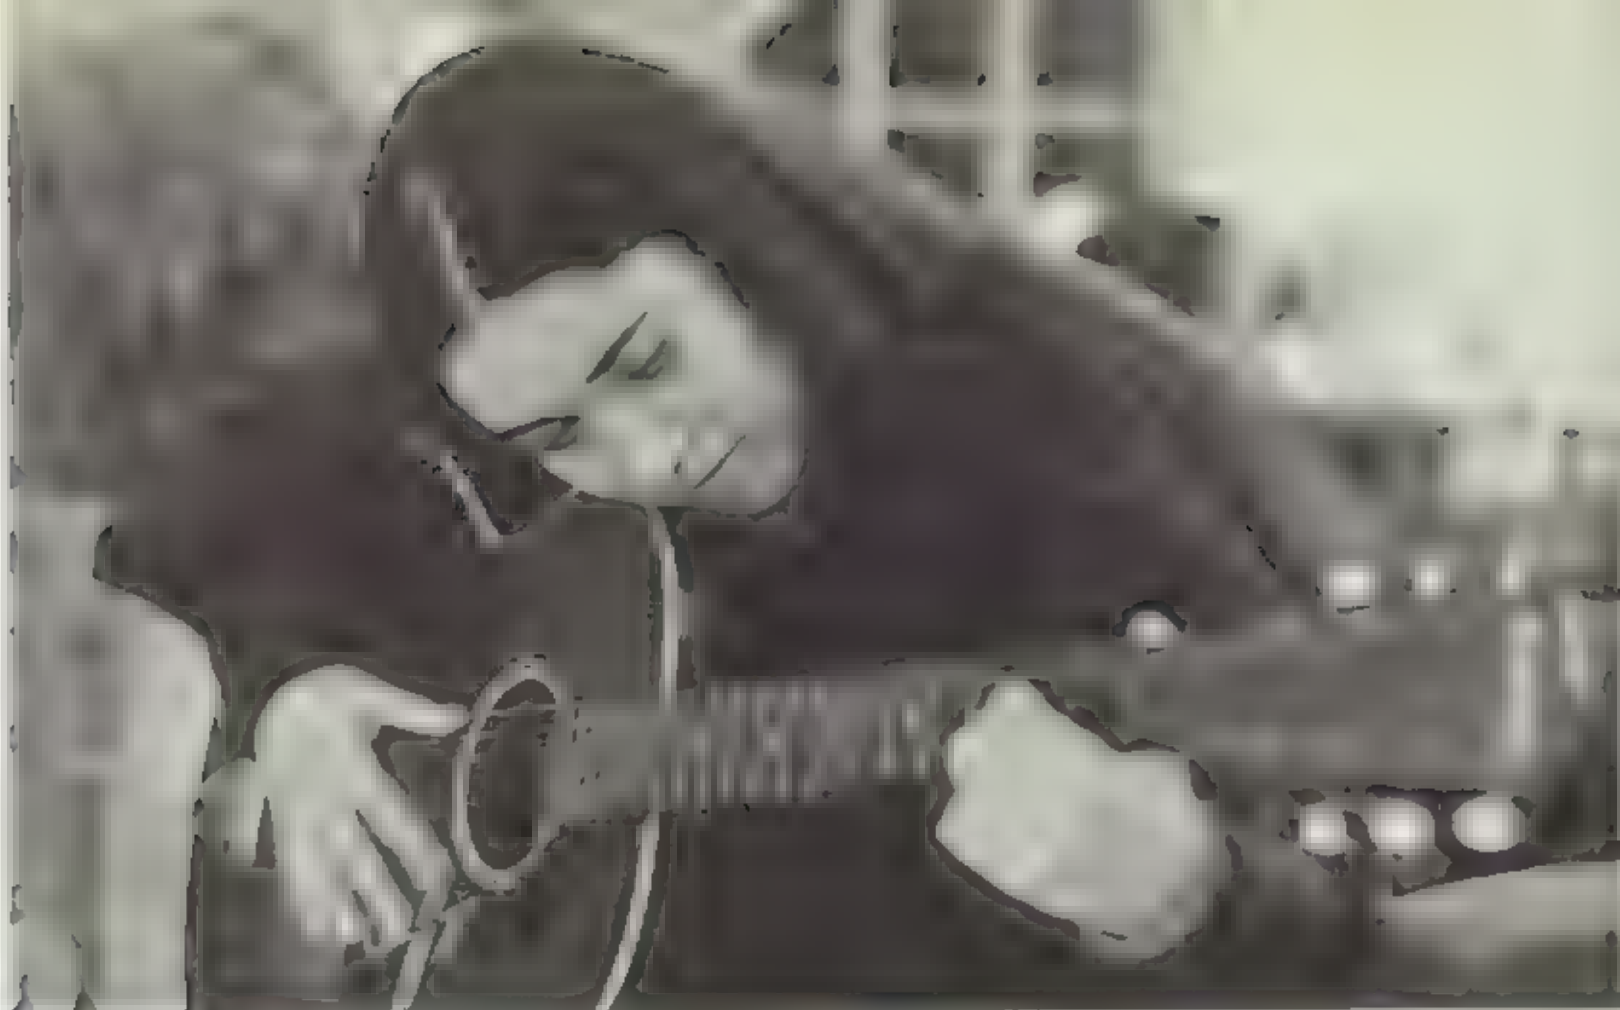

His unexpected reply to the interviewer evokes a self-satisfied grin from Robi

Robi likes rock music, friends, size of country

"I think I hardly will feel happy again in Switzerland after a year in the United States," says foreign student Robert Aeschbach. "Switzerland seems so small and the United States so large: here you can travel days and days and still be in the United States."

Robi, who lives with Bruce Heaton's family, likes best to relax by listening to rock music on his record player. He says that he enjoys being with young people his own age. When Robi returns to Switzerland next year, he will enroll in a university to study math and engineering.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Heaton got along well with Robi, and Mrs. Heaton described him as "an unbeatable cookie jar raider."

Susy sees snow for first time, saves snowball

Susy Bazan, foreign student from Bolivia, says that seeing snow for the very first time was one of the exciting experiences in her United States year. After the first snowfall in November, Susy made a big snowball which she saved in the family freezer all winter, planning to take it back home with her when her AFS year was over. Susy likes math and science, and she hopes to study engineering in a Bolivian university after she returns home.

Ellen Gasvoda, with whose family Susy resided during her stay here explained that as long as she can remember she wished to have a foreign sister stay with her. Mrs. Gasvoda described the entire experience as "utterly magnificent." Susy's only complaint was that her visit here seemed too short.

Katriina finds winter cold here 'like Siberia'

Katriina Kukkonen, an AFS student from Finland, approached her new experience of living a year in the United States with a lively, amused curiosity. Her enthusiasm found its way to her studies, and, in spite of studying in a second language, she made the honor roll at LT. The school orchestra also benefited from Kati's efforts as she played in the first violin section.

One favorite part of the year for Kati was a winter vacation with her host family, the George Hoopers, in Florida, where she finally found warm weather. She said that one part of her American experience that was disappointing to her was the fact that Chicago winters are "like those in Siberia." Kati had expected to find the weather in LaGrange much warmer than in her native Finland.

Gottfried, Erik share family in U.S. year

Erik Sundberg, from Sweden, and Gottfried Weinmann, from Germany, were placed in a unique situation by the International Christian Youth Exchange. Both were assigned to the Western Springs home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Miller, who have no children living at home. Although meeting people at LT was hard for both of them because they did not live with a student their own age they each felt that people here judged them not only because of their status as foreign students but also for their own individuality

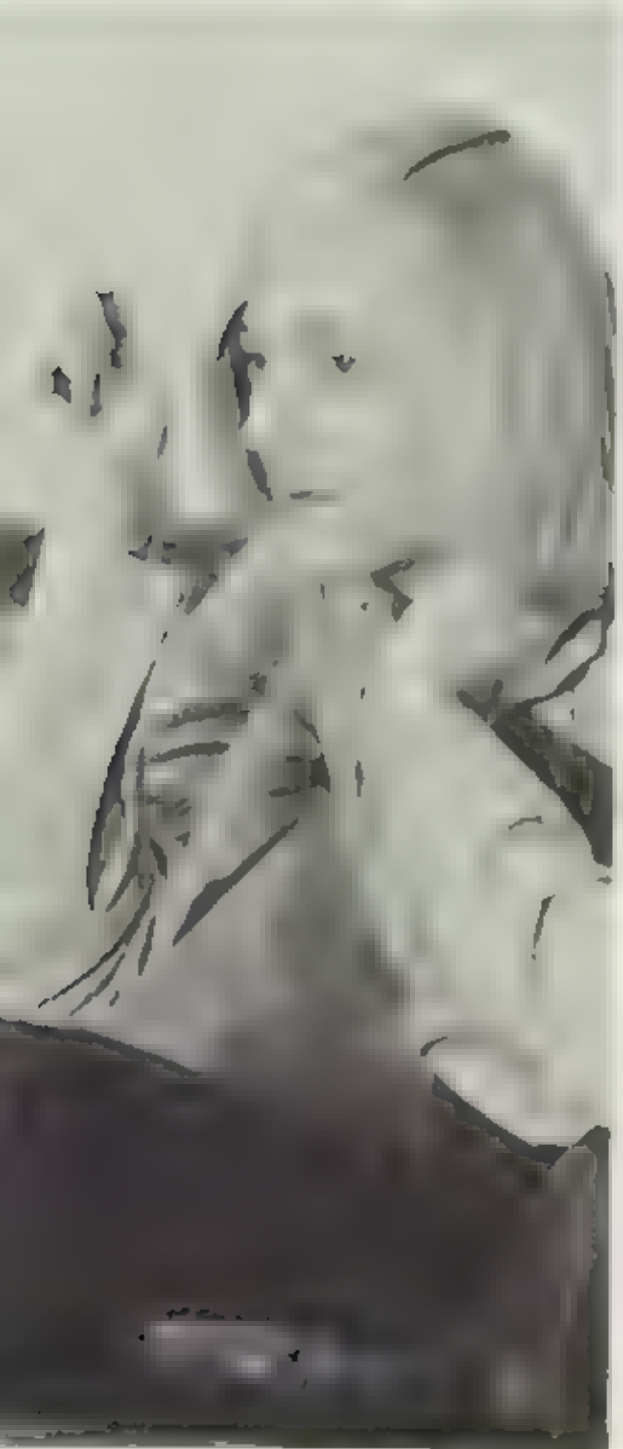

After returning to Germany, Gottfried hopes to study modern history and politics at an institute in Berlin. Erik would like to attend a film school in Stockholm and ultimately become a photographer. However, both must resolve the problem of compulsory military service in their respective countries as soon as they return

Immigrants add foreign flavor to LT

Along with exchange students, many immigrants have mixed some foreign culture into LT life this year. The immigrants come from countries ranging from Korea to Iran to Italy and differ in their command of English from barely understanding to speaking fluently

La Grange's terrain seems dull to most of the foreign students because they come from mountainous or sea-side areas. Usually they miss their old school friends and after-school diversions. Most of them, however, are filling the void with new friends and are getting used to such features of United States culture as large shopping centers, big cities, different food, and a large choice of movies

'Wide World of Sports' greets Class of '47

Before the school year had even begun, chairman Ann Davis and her homecoming committee had spent many long hours to make "Wide World of Sports" a success. The week of October 11-16, designated to honor LT sports and the alumni of 25 years ago, saw float building get underway on Monday

People of all ages lined the parade route Saturday morning to witness Sports Illustrated." "The Game of the Week" filled the bleachers to capacity, and it appeared that the spirit affected the players as they trounced York 53-19. Saturday evening, Queen Marlene Falco and her court reigned over the dance, "The Games People Play" the quiet finale of an exhausting week

Summer Theatre Workshop stages 4 different plays

Summer Theater Workshop faced an unusually heavy schedule which included visiting the Shakespearean Festival in Stratford, Canada, and producing four different plays. During the six weeks of the workshop students made costumes, built props painted scenery, studied scripts learned stage craft and drama fundamentals, planned the four-day visit to Stratford, and produced the plays

The workshop was innovative in staging the plays in three locations at North Campus. The Unsinkable Molly Brown, a musical, was presented in the auditorium. Winnie the Pooh, which drew throngs of neighborhood children, was seen in the theatre room; and two serious dramas Please, No Flowers and The Man Who Loved God, were done outdoors in the patio. Miss Donna Mavros, Mr. Fred Lawler, and two former LT students, Cathie Willkie and Pam Tredici, directed the productions

Alternate casts produce moving Glass Menagerie

The Glass Menagerie was a difficult play to perform because of Tennessee Williams' tendency for pathos; yet Theatre Board presented it capably as this year's Fall Play.

Mr. Frank Stacey was director of the show concerning the problems a Southern woman created for her two children. The four main figures in the play were portrayed by two alternate casts of students who researched Tennessee Williams and the play's main characters before the performance in the multi-purpose room at South Campus.

Full house applauds Charlie Brown

Immediately after the stage rights for You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown were released, Theatre Board began working on its production for the winter play. Six actors were cast as Charles Schultz's main characters. With the aid of teacher directors Mr. David Thompson and Miss Lynne Bradley and student directors Pat Hayes and Elaine Roos, the cast performed in the round with only large blocks as props. The play was viewed by full-house audiences and received four standing ovations.

Operetta shows nostalgic life in Russian village

The happiness and heartbreak of life in the Jewish community of Anatevka in Tsarist Russia was the subject of this year's operetta, Fiddler On The Roof. Produced by Mr. Fred Lawler and the LT choir, the operetta was the last show to be done in the auditorium before it underwent complete renovation. Success of the show depended largely upon the ability of cast members to portray characters totally removed from their own life styles

As director Miss Donna Mavros said

The show is about the simple human part of our lives. Those bits and pieces of our past, that were once so near and dear—but that we don't have time for now. Sophisticated people call those things 'nostalgia.' Real people call them 'traditions.' It's whatever affected us when we were young and impressionable

Sad Cafe treats deep emotions, personalities

In a change of pace, South Campus attempted a serious dramatic production for its fall play, The Ballad of Sad Cafe. Mr. Michael Drake and student director Julie Maisch directed the play with emphasis on emotions and personalities of characters so that viewers would think of the story as "almost a painting" instead of as a sequence of events.

The plot deals with a lady in a small southern town, her dissociation from her husband, and her subsequent withdrawal from life. The tone is serious throughout the play.

Spring play tells tale of love triangle

In the spring the NC Theatre Board's fancy turned to thoughts of Luv. The play concerned the comic tale of a love triangle involving a man, his wife, and a college friend of the husband. Amid laughter, the story moved from the couple's disinterest in each other to divorce and then to a new marriage for each, and, finally, to their eventual realization of their love for each other.

Many successful productions gave evidence of the efficiency of the North Campus Theatre Board, sponsored by Miss Donna Mavros. North Campus shows included The Glass Menagerie, You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, and Luv.

Increased membership in South Campus Theatre Board, sponsored by Mr Richard Albright, reflected a growing interest in theatre at South Campus. The group gained experience by producing three plays: The Ballad of a Sad Cafe, Mrs. McThing, and Don't Drink the Water.

Corral starts coffee house, alters by-laws

As a result of a workshop early in the fall, several new activities were introduced at the Corral. A coffee house, with refreshments and a piano, was opened in the old TV room. There were several talent nights, and various groups played on Friday and Saturday nights. In the spring there was a Grafitti Night where members could paint the walls of the Corral. An amendment to the present by-laws added an Associate Board and changed election procedures.

The Corral Show was the climax of the year, with the proceeds going toward paying the debt that the Corral owes for its recent expansion. The show, Once and for All, was a parody about the everyday hang-ups in life. Corral Show was staged in the South Campus multi-purpose room by adult director Mr. David Thompson and student directors Heidi Hough, Gary Leviton, and Jim Kelly.

Con-Con reorganizes Student Council

Reorganizing the Student Association was the major goal of Student Council. At the beginning of the year, the council attempted to abolish Representative Assembly, but because of a constitutional provision, the sixty percent No vote was not sufficient to abolish the assembly. A constitutional convention met after the referendum failed.

The standing committees of Student Council took care of social obligations, publicity, foreign relations, and senior discussion leaders. In addition, a student lounge committee was delegated to open and operate the NC lounge.

Committee Chairmen Mark Layer, Mary Hinni, and Mark Meyers organized the sales with the aid of sponsors Mr. Robert Paolicchi and Mr. Robert Susin.

The money raised by the committee was used by Student Council for various projects. The greatest change in Business Management's activities was the addition of several hot dog warmers at the chilly late season football games.

Con-con offers changes in Rep Assembly

Rep Assembly received an extended life this year after the referendum to abolish it was defeated in the fall

To improve student association's efficiency, a constitutional convention met twice a week from November through January. The proposed constitution recommended a one house government, with elections only for executive officers. Interested students would be able to petition for rep assembly positions. A student bill of rights was drawn up by the convention and was included in the new constitution Upholding a fourteen-year tradition, Senior Discussion Leaders again advised inexperienced freshmen on subjects such as the spirit and excitement of Homecoming and representation in student government. Students aspiring to be discussion leaders applied the previous spring by writing an essay on inter-campus relations. They participated in a cancer fund collection as well as in Kiwanis Peanut Day and Pancake Day. Their most important project this year was compiling and distributing a student directory.

Students for People, Forum actively react

Forum found its basic emphasis shifting from a passive reaction to political events toward a active political role. Cooperation with the Citizen's Council on Priorities of Western Springs gave student opinions a voice in Springfield through the organization's lobbyists. Forum also presented prominent gubernatorial candidates for the upcoming election. In addition, British and Irish consuls were scheduled to debate the Northern Ireland crisis. Because of the legislation allowing the 18-year-old vote, Forum's senior participation greatly increased.

Students for People was composed of students eager to donate their time and energy to people in need of attention or, more often, just friendly conversation. Under the supervision of Mr. Gregory Beste, members served as aides at Colonial Manor Nursing Home and volunteered their efforts at the Chicago State Mental Institution. A smiling face was sometimes the only reward, but the students said they thought it more than sufficient.

Distinguished by its reputation for constant activity, Conservation Club also became known for its service to the neighboring villages. Monthly field trips, including bike hikes visits to local water treatment, sewage, glass, and paper recycling plants, and a canoe trip, inspired members to investigate the quality of their environment.

Club efforts directed by co-chairmen Neal Bratschun and Phyllis Crocker were aimed at informing local citizens and members of the means of tackling ecological problems.

WLTL wins support, gains wider coverage

With increased community support, WLTL continued its program of music, news, sports, and educational broadcasting to area listeners. Under the guidance of the sponsor, Miss Catherine Ott, and station manager Tom Chambers, the school's FM radio station achieved a more professional sound. Community retailers donated an adequate record library, and the University of Chicago, SIU and NASA donated educational tapes. A Chicago radio station, WIND, sanctioned WLTL's broadcasting of special events, such as the president's speeches, direct from their air waves.

Find friends in special interest clubs

Finding new friends with a common interest has become increasingly difficult in the massive turbulent world of LT, but Special Interest Clubs made significant progress toward solving this problem.

It was not uncommon to hear four or five future scientists from Bi-Phy-Chem or Astro-Science discussing thermo-nuclear warfare, or War Games enthusiasts debating the practicality of famous war strategies. It was also encouraging to learn that some students from Chess Club have mastered techniques to outwit even the pros. Valuable collections from Camera Club and Stamp and Coin buffs can be viewed often in any unsuspecting classroom. Railway intricacies and riflery specialties were dealt with in LTSME and Rifle, two other special interest clubs. Home ec, riding clubs cultivate members' skills

Combining enjoyment with homemaking learning, Home Ec Club members used their skills for the benefit of others. Under the guidance of Mrs. Linda Masek at North and Miss Carol McKenna at South, the club developed girls' interests in foods, clothing and homemaking. The club distributed Halloween baskets in Chicago hospitals and held a bake sale to help support the Chicago Drug Control Center. NC members organized a pizza party, a fashion show, and a Christmas boutique where hand-made items were sold.

Horse lovers learned riding techniques weekly at Keith Line Stables as members of Saddle and Spur. The fifty members planned trail rides, attended polo games and visited the International Horse Show in early December. In addition, the club, under president Jan Caliendo, arranged a trip to Colorado.

Speech, debate teams develop forensic skills

Ending with state-wide competition in early March, the Speech Team participated in six tournaments plus two contests which were optional for individuals: the American Legion Oratorical Contest and the Voice of Democracy contest.

Mr. Frank Stacy and Miss Donna Mavros met with and coached students in the eleven categories of extemporaneous speaking, original oration, after dinner speaking, radio speaking, oratorical declamation, duet acting, dramatic reading, humorous reading, verse reading, original monolog, and prose reading. At tournaments, contestants were either given topics to speak on at once or presented programs which had been previously prepared.

This year the Debate Team placed more emphasis on individual research and case analysis than on actual practice in debating the topic "Resolved: that the jury system in the United States be significantly changed." Under Mr. James Waage's and Miss Dearlean Boone's supervision, the team met once or twice a week to discuss cases.

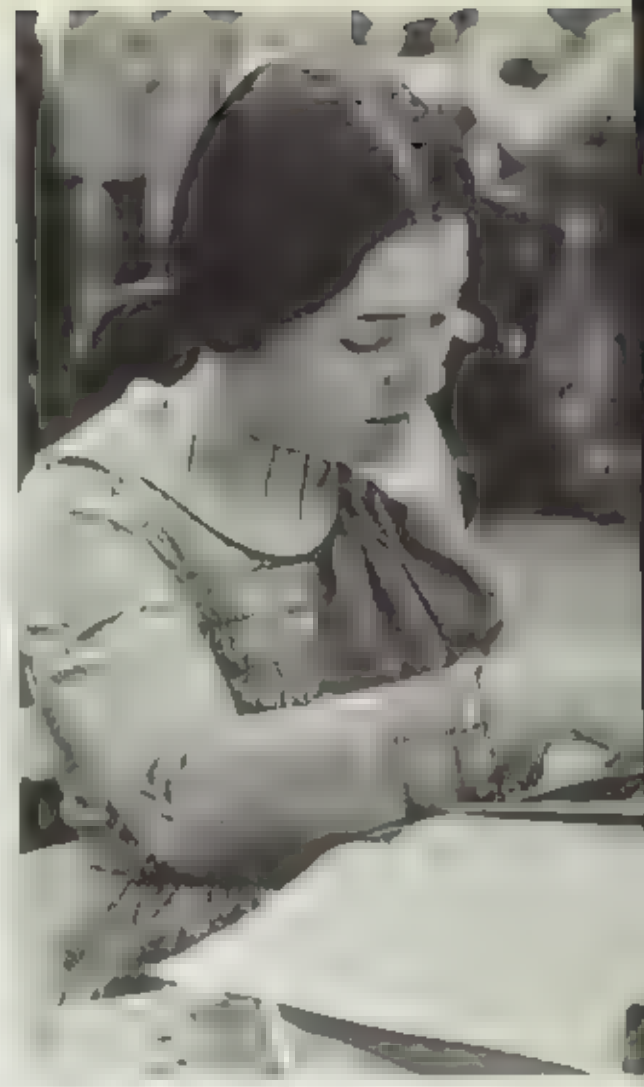

In the summer two varsity debaters attended the Georgetown University debate institute and placed first in its final tournament. Another debater went to University of Michigan and took second place. One junior-varsity debater placed high in the finals at Georgetown. At the end of October, a mock tournament was held in which the varsity judged novices in their first debate experience.

Tab yearbook office projects unique charm

Anyone who has had the misfortune of entering the Tab office, Room 219 NC, cannot avoid memories of such dismaying situations as misplaced idents, lost pages of copy, and indescribable pictures. Anyone who somehow escaped this room, known affectionately as the home of the LT yearbook, could not share with Tab editors and staffers the poignant pleasures of such a home-away-from-home

The Tab office is just a room, but it has a certain quality known only to the editorial hierarchy, certain staffers, and those close to them. Scrawled messages on the blackboard or taped to the door, occasional free chicken and a succession of MacDonalds dinners, the keep truckin' poster, the Lion doormat, inside jokes, an incredible number of papers and photos piled up on the brightly-painted desks, wild arguments over which station to play on the radio—all combine to attract Tab people back to Room 219 time after time

Lion receives Pacemaker, national honors

Because of its consistently high quality, the Lion for the second time in ten years won the Pacemaker Award for journalistic excellence. Last year's editors received the recognition at a presentation during the National Scholastic Press Association convention at the Palmer House in November.

A new teacher was adviser for the Lion this year, replacing Miss Kay Keefe who had served as Lion adviser for 25 years. The present adviser, Mr. John Wheeler, encouraged policy changes, such as the establishment of a South Campus news bureau so that news from both campuses would reach the Lion's subscribers.

German Club enjoys dinner, swim, bike hike

German Club planned its annual dinner in December instead of May so that German students could become better acquainted with each other early in the year. The dinner was held at The Golden Ox, where club members not only enjoyed German music, food, and dancing, but learned more about German culture as well.

Sponsor, Mr. Albert Hoch, and president Sue Indrelunas also arranged for a February swim party and a May bike hike, in addition to the traditional root beer and pretzel booth at Club Carnival.

Club members sample Russian, Spanish culture

Activities began early in the year for Spanish Club, whose president Denise Madden decided to hold the club's annual restaurant trip in November. Club sponsors, Mr. Llewellyn Davies, Miss Marilyn Pavlik, and Miss Marsha Schwartz, and club members agreed that the cuisine at Los Amigos in Niles was quite different from American food. At Christmas, the club's yearly party featured candy-filled pinatas made by members, Spanish Christmas carols, and Spanish dancing, which foreign student Suzy Bazan of Bolivia naturally dominated.

Despite the prolonged illness of Mr. Frank Petronaitis, the club sponsor, Russian Club participated in many activities that brought a flavor of Russian culture to club members. The club absorbed foreign atmosphere by visiting a Russian church and attending a Russian concert. Two annual events were repeated: the Christmas potluck and the awards banquet at the end of the year honoring outstanding Russian students. Mr. Petronaitis proposed to climax the year's activities with a three-week tour of Russia, including stops at Moscow, Leningrad, and Kiev this summer.

GAC expands to meet girls' sport interests

In a sizeable organization, the needs and interests of each member must be considered in order to operate successfully. GAC, Girls Activity Council, in its second year of existence, again offered a full program of after-school activities. In addition they sponsored interscholastic and co-recreational events such as volleyball and badminton tournaments. Outstanding girls were recognized at an awards banquet in May

Girls especially skilled in Gymnastics attended practices to further advance and diversified their talents. Exhibiting artistic creativity, the Dance Club planned and performed a recital in the spring. Lettermen, Pep Club volunteer to serve school

Despite hectic class and social commitments, LT's Pep Club and Lettermen's Club again accepted additional responsibilities at athletic and school functions. Pep Club was responsible for the attractive hall banners as well as locker room decorations. They also worked hard to present LT's first Winter Sports Festival.

LT's Lettermen triumphantly kicked off the fall sports season with their traditional dance in September. In addition to ushering at games, the Lettermen volunteered to aid Student Council by cleaning the student lounge monthly.

The two South Campus Cheerleading squads were each composed of five eager freshmen and five experienced sophomore girls. Cheerleading sponsor Miss Mary Wisner worked with them twice a week at school, and several of the girls engaged in competition at summer camps and clinics.

At North also, cheerleaders were divided into two different types of squads. The gold squad took charge of basketball and soccer, while blue inspired school spirit in football games and wrestling meets.

Varsity football squad places fourth in WSC

Coach J.O. Jackson's varsity Football team, with only eight returning lettermen, fought their way to fourth place in the West Suburban Conference. Triumphs over Oak Park and Maine East opened the season for the Lions. Soph football team earns conference first

The Sophomore Football team coached by Mr. Robert Burson, started its season with back to back wins over Oak Park and Maine East by the identical scores of 35-0. Two more victories over Downers Grove North and Hinsdale, plus a disappointing loss to York, finished up the first five games.

However, refusing to submit to great pressure for the remaining games LT won its last three contests to wind up the season sharing a three way tie for first place in the conference with York and Glenbard West.

Varsity soccer ninth, sophs second in state

With the return of nine lettermen, the varsity Soccer team finished the season with a 9-7-1 record. The team, assisted by high-scoring Scott Racine and Ian Sievwright, claimed two important victories against tough New Trier West and St. Joseph of Westchester. All-conference player Rick Tucci, although playing less than half of the season because of injuries, was the team's high scorer. At the close of the season, the varsity squad was ranked ninth in the state on the basis of the number of the team's victories as well as the quality of the teams defeated by the Lions.

Aided by the experience of Coach Ray Ingersoll, the frosh-soph soccer team posted an impressive 13-3-2 record. The team took second place in both the Maine East sophomore tournament and the Inter-Eight Conference.

Cross Country ends sixth, sophs win No. 1 title

Varsity Cross Country finished sixth in conference after a disappointing season. Dave Allen set several new school records, but the combination of his effective performance and the efforts of his teammates could not top the competition.

For the second successive year, the sophomore team, led by Coach Jim Kilbreth and most valuable player Paul Ulrich, won the conference title to complete a spectacular undefeated season.

Team men on the bench exult in the closing moments of the Hinsdale game

Basketball makes it to Sweet Sixteen

The Varsity Basketball Team was indeed a team in every sense of the word. Unlike the championship teams of the past two years which consisted of one super-star and several other good players, the Lions proved to be a balanced team. Although the team, playing in the shadow of the Hinsdale Red Devils, did not take the conference crown, it managed to place second and post a handsome 12-2 record

In the annual Proviso West Holiday Tournament, the Lions defeated Proviso East and captured the title. In the state tournament, LT advanced as far as the super sectionals and finished with a 22-5 overall record

Soph basketball easily takes first place

Improving their third place finish in conference action last season, the Sophomore Basketball Team romped to a first place in the West Suburban conference this year. After losing the first two games, the Cubs snapped back and became consistent in their winning ways

During the season, the team managed to lose only one conference match while beating a non-conference foe, Maine South, which had been undefeated in the last two years. At the close of the season, the Cubs had accomplished a 13-1 record in the conference. Ron Sterrenberg was voted Most Valuable Player, placed on the varsity team, and asked to play in the state tournament

Gymnastics has top season, features juniors

Varsity Gymnastics, coached by Mr. Ray Ingersoll, amazed growing crowds with a great improvement over last year. Captains Tony Ballotti and John Arends pushed the team to the best season that varsity has enjoyed for a long time. With the combination of the juniors, who make up most of the varsity team, and the talented sophomores, Coach Ingersoll expects to have an even better season next year.

The Sophomore Gymnastics team, captained by John Ellis and Paul Lat, showed great promise. The gymnasts continued to help each other with tricks, and the coach concentrated on teaching all-around.

Working with gymnastics is Circus Club, an organization that gives students the opportunity to participate in gymnastics-oriented activities. Chairman Carol Lehrman and co-chairman Jill Zawadzki headed the new club that practices with such playthings as unicycles and minitramps and also offers juggling and group tumbling activities.

Wrestlers show promise, finish 'enjoyable' year

In finishing what Coach Vern Allers considered an "enjoyable" season, the Varsity Wrestling Team, captained by John Gorgol and Dave Battaglia, compiled a conference record of 3-3-1. This year's showing did not match last year's excellence, but the coach blamed much of the trouble on a "lack of personnel."

The Frosh-Soph Wrestling Team, coached by Mr. Lewis Hankenson, showed a hard determination to win and a willing spirit to learn and practice. Coach Hankenson says that next year seems very promising, with the experienced freshmen and sophomores putting new life into the team.

Swim team places fifth in state meet

After completing only their third year with the convenience of LT pool facilities, Coach John Weber's Swim Team has already earned a reputation for winning. LT's sweeping victory in the Riverside-Brookfield Invitational was one of the bright moments of the season.

Finishing second in the conference with a 4-1 record, the Sealions proved to be an increasingly strong threat to Hinsdale Central's hold on the conference and state titles. Of LT's ten state qualifiers, only two were seniors. The Sealions ended the year fifth in state, with a hopeful eye on the upcoming season.

Girl swimmers given chance to compete

Girls were for the first time given an opportunity to display their Competitive Swimming abilities this year. Swim team workshops were held in September and October. Meets were regulated by the Illinois State High School Association, which set three as the maximum number of contests a girl may participate in. The meet held at LT was filmed for a television news report concerning the issue of girls' competition in athletics.

Swim Timers aid officials, time swimmers

The LT Swim Timers continued to help at the meets this year by timing swimmers during races, operating the recall rope, working the scoreboard and helping the officials at the scorers' table. The girls were divided into two groups which timed at alternate swim meets. They proved themselves invaluable to the swim team because their accurate timing allowed each swimmer to concentrate on his own performance in each race.

The Swim Chicks, a subdivision of Timers, was a new group instituted to time the Sealions at practice. These practice timings enabled the Lions to estimate times for meets and project qualifications at state meets.

Guard teaches swim lessons, supervises pool

LT's Synchronized Swim Club, known as Aquarians, demonstrated the art of swimming in the show "A Little Bit of Sole," held in May. A swimmer turned shoe repair man with the pool as his workshop narrated the tale. Setting body movements to music, the swimmers expressed the story of bare feet, combat boots, spikes, wing tips and heels, bedroom slippers, and cowboy boots

Under the direction of Mr. John C. Weber, LT Guard helped promote interest in swimming activities in school and throughout the community. Saturday morning swim lessons, recreational swimming, family swimming, and adult swim education were the four major responsibilities delegated to Guard Club

Veterans return to strengthen varsity track

Two of last year's state finishers, Jim McMath and Scott Racine, returned to give the Varsity Track team a strong advantage. Coached by Mr. Max Armer and his assistants, Mr. James Kilbreth and Mr. Duane Foster, the Lions hoped to equal or surpass last year's state rating.

The success of the runners in the indoor season led Coach Armer to believe his team had an excellent chance of overcoming the stiff WSC competition during the outdoor season.

Lettermen bolster varsity golf team

Aiming to win its third consecutive conference and district championships, the Varsity Golf Team practiced daily during the last nine weeks of school. Two returning lettermen and three juniors from last year's frosh-soph team gave the team a solid core with which to uphold LT's golf reputation of being consistently good.

Varsity Coach Bert Kraus and Frosh-Soph Coach Art Suchomel held practice sessions at Timber Trails and LaGrange country clubs. Because a revised system of selecting state champions was instituted last year, the golf team met tougher sectional competition.

Baseball team plans for winning season

Preparing to defeat such threatening opposition as Downers Grove and Proviso, Varsity Baseball practiced nightly beginning in the early weeks of March. Because baseball has won championships every five years historically (the last two winning teams being 1962 and 1967), Coaches Richard Leiber and Robert Burson suggested that this year's team, being "as good as any in the past," aims to return downstate.

The team included six returning lettermen and played a relatively balanced conference. The sophomore Cubs were inspired by a new coach, Mr. Derrick Gilbert.

Intramurals provide diverse sport activities

A smaller Intramural Board was utilized to create a more organized intramural program. The five-man board tried to provide various sports activities which interested the majority of junior and senior boys. The intramural board system, which originated three years ago, has become the core of the after-school athletic program which is supervised by Mr. Art Sandusky.

The intramural board asked students to sign up for the activities in which they were most interested. Football, basketball, volleyball, and water polo were on the list of sports offered. In addition to organizing team competition, board members officiated at the events.

Freshmen pick up routines of high school

With the help and guidance of Mrs. Janis Leich and Mr. Frank Lennertz, class sponsors, the members of the Freshman Class conquered their uneasiness and picked up the routine of high school. By November the freshman had elected Mike Pierce president, Sarah Hansman vice-president, Beccy Schmidt treasurer, and Pat Cardar secretary. The twelve members of the class board met every Tuesday after school to discuss plans for class activities.

Since elections for class board were late, the freshmen missed Homecoming planning. Fortunately, Mrs. Alice Pierce helped the freshmen plan and build an innovative display which won an honorable mention.

Sophs petition for membership on class board

Sophomores discovered that maturity accompanied the responsibility of dominating South Campus. With the support of sponsors Mrs. Marilyn Stangeland and Mr. Kenneth Sloat, the class designed and constructed its float for Homecoming. It planned an assembly for the entertainment of the class. The class party was held in March, and a booth in the Club Carnival finished the year.

The new requirements for class board members prompted increased participation of the sophomores. The selection of class colors gave sophomores a new sense of identity and pride in their class.

Junior class tries to involve, unite members

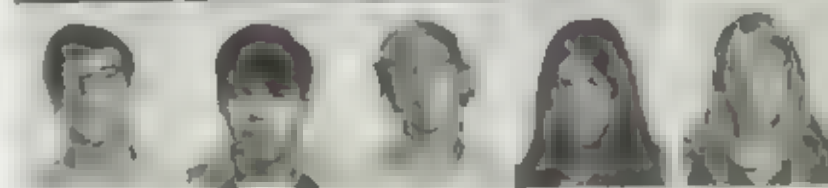

After orienting itself to a new campus, the Junior Class tackled the problem of effective class board participation. Under the guidance of the class sponsors, Mrs. Mary Martin and Mr. Paul Guyer, and the leadership of Dave Minella, class president, the class first held open board meetings and later instituted an elected class board.

Work on "In Dukes We Thrust," the junior Homecoming float, helped set the pace of unity and cooperation that the class worked to maintain throughout the year. This spirit was carried into other projects, such as the class party and Senior Salute. This year can be remembered by the juniors as one of reaching out to bring the class closer together.
